While participation is encouraged, there's no need to stress too much about the results. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Learning Materials and Supplies The school provides textbooks and some learning materials. If additional items are required, teachers will notify students in advance. Parents are kindly asked to assist by checking and signing the agenda book daily. Language Communication: Although some teachers and classmates may speak English, the primary language of communication is Mandarin. If the visiting student does not speak Mandarin, it's recommended to learn key phrases to seek help, such as "Excuse me, what is this?" and "Can you say that again?" Program Goals and Assessments Experience is essential for effective learning. The main goal of this short-term program is for overseas students to immerse themselves in Taiwanese culture and gain insight into the Taiwanese education system. Participation is optional and can be based on each student's personal circumstances. Recommendations for Visiting Students During your time at the host school, approach the experience with an open mind and try not to over-compare it with previous academic achievements or learning experiences, as this may create unnecessary pressure. This will help make the learning experience smoother and more enjoyable. |

The design highlights key historical and industrial elements, including the Octagonal Kiln, gourds, and a century-old well dug by the Li clan during the Qing Dynasty. The materials used, such as charred bricks (outer surface), plain bricks (inner surface), and tube tiles (top), all originate from the village’s traditional craftsmanship. The gourd featured in the visual design symbolizes the unity and collective vision of the Fu Liao community in striving for peace and prosperity. As an eye-catching public art installation along Zhongtan Highway, it stands as a meaningful landmark celebrating the village’s cultural identity. |
